In 1876, 30-year-old Englishman George T. Morgan, became the assistant engraver at the Philadelphia Mint. He studied with Leonard Charles Wyon before coming to America.

After a meeting with US Mint Director Dr. Henry Linderman, Morgan enrolled in the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts. He was planning on designing a dollar coin, he still needed to learn more.

Morgan made many studies of Greek profiles and looked for a girl to represent the Goddess of Liberty on the dollar coin.

By early 1877, George T. Morgan created the new design that is now called the Morgan Dollar.
